CLAGGETT.—At her home in Salem, on the evening of Friday, August 23, 1889, Mrs. Charles Claggett, aged seventy-six years.

The deceased was born at Elkton, Kentucky, April 1, 1813, and made the trip across the plains to Oregon in 1852, settling upon their arrival here on the Clagget homestead, four miles north of Salem. In July, 1832, she was married to Charles Claggett, who survives her.

The funeral will be conducted tomorrow at ten A.M., from the family residence, the remains being interred in the family burying ground north of the city.
CHARLES CLAGGET—1852

(Source: Miss Nina McNary, Salem, Oregon, 1927.)

Charles Clagget was one of the most honored and respected of the early Marion county pioneers. His family were widely connected with those of other pioneers, the McNarys, Irvines, Pugh's, etc. The descendants of this worthy man are legion throughout Oregon.

Charles Clagget crossed the plains by ox team in 1852, but at this time very little can be learned of this trip. After their arrival in Marion county, Mr. Clagget took up a donation land claim just north of Salem, where he and his good wife, who was a Miss Irvine, lived to an old age.

A large family of ten children came of this union, but only three daughters and one son grew to maturity. Of these were:

W. D.

Sally H., who married John Pugh.

Mary Margaret, who married Hugh L. McNary, and, according to "Pen Pictures From the Garden of the World," by Hines (page 989), he says that Charles Clagget was born in Kentucky in 1818. He was a son of Thomas Clagget, also of Kentucky, whose wife was Mary Mason, of the same state.

[Book of Remembrance by Steeves p. 258]
The construction of the [Charlie] Claggett house was interesting. In the Southern style, it had a large entry with a small room on either side of it, the entry being as large as one of the rooms. In Claggett's time the small room on the north side of the entry had been used as a bedroom by anybody traveling the highway into Salem. A bed was always ready for a weary traveler, and, as there was only an outside door to the room, anyone could stop at any hour of the night without disturbing the family.

The main part of the house was two stories high and each floor consisted of only two very large rooms. There were back-to-back fireplaces in the north and south high-ceilinged rooms on the first floor. Upstairs the boys slept in the larger of the two rooms and the girls in the other. The only heat for the second floor came through the open stairway near the kitchen.

The shed-like addition in the back of the house was the kitchen area and had been added sometime after the original construction of the main house. On the back porch was a pitcher pump to provide water for the house.

Although it appeared solid, the house had to be replaced [c. 1906] because the foundation timbers, which were placed on large rocks, had rotted out."

REST FOR AN OLD PIONEER

Uncle Charley Claggett Passed Away on Last Sunday

HE LEAVES A CONSIDERABLE ESTATE IN THIS COUNTY WHERE HE HAS RESIDED FOR A HALF CENTURY—WAS A NATIVE OF KENTUCKY.

Charles Claggett, a pioneer of 1852, and one of the most highly respected and honorable residents of Marion County, died at his farm four miles north of this city at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning, after an illness of only a few days of old age, aged 91 days short of 92 years.

Deceased was born in Woodford county, Kentucky, October 13, 1812, and came to Salem on October 12, 1852. On his arrival here he bought a Donation Land Claim four miles north of Salem, containing 200 acres, and on this land, now one of the most valuable farms in Marion county, he reared his homestead and raised his family. As he prospered he bought additional lands, increasing his holdings to about 300 acres, and this property is in an excellent state of cultivation. Mr. and Mrs. Claggett resided on the farm for a third of a century, raising a family of ten children, of whom only one—W. D. Claggett—of this city, is now living.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the Claggett homestead near this city, and interment was had in the family cemetery on the farm.

Deceased was one of the most highly respected residents of the county. He was a man of sterling integrity, and his counsel was sought by many of the best people. He was not a member of any religious organization, but was a regular attendant of, and a large contributor to, the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and for a number of years—strange as it may seem—he was a member of the official governing body of the local congregation of that denomination. In politics he was originally a Democrat, but since the war between the states he affiliated with the Republican party, in the councils of which he always stood high.

Deceased leaves an estate valued at about $15,000. He leaves one son, 22 grandchildren, and seven great grandchildren. Among the grandchildren are Attorneys John H. and C. L. McNary, both of this city. Mr. Claggett belonged to a family noted for longevity. Of the four brothers and one sister, only one, a brother, died under the age of 85—and he was instantly killed in this state a number of years ago.

Mr. Claggett was a gentleman of the highest integrity, and was one of the kindest of men. He was never heard to say an unkind word of any man, and few there are who will acknowledge to a feeling of anything but the highest respect for the deceased.
DEATH OF
CHARLES CLAGGETT

Passed Away at the Age of 86 Years, Sunday

Charles Claggett, a pioneer of 1852, died at his home north of Salem, Sunday morning, October 5, 1902. He was aged 89 years.

Deceased was born in Kentucky, October 13, 1813.

Funeral services were conducted at the late home of deceased this afternoon.

He resided in Kentucky until about 1845, when he removed to Missouri and engaged in farming in that state. In 1852 he crossed the plains to Oregon, and took the donation land claim which was his home at the time of his death. From 1879 to 1901 Mr. Claggett lived in Salem, but a year ago he insisted upon returning to the scenes of his more active life to spend the remainder of his days.

While residing in Kentucky, Mr. Claggett married Miss Mary Irvine, who died some 16 years ago. Thirteen children were born to them, of whom but one, W. D. Claggett, of Salem, is still living. The deceased leaves 22 grandchildren, among them John H. McNary, C. L. McNary, Miss Nina McNary, Mrs. T. H. Bruce and Mrs. W. T. Stoiz, of this city.
PROMINENT PIONEER GONE.

Charles Claggett, Active in Marion County Since 1852.

SALEM, Or., Oct. 5.—(Special.)—Charles Claggett, an Oregon pioneer of 1852, died at his home five miles north of Salem this morning of old age. Deceased was born in Kentucky, October 15, 1813, and, therefore, was almost 89 years old when he died. He resided in Kentucky until about 1846, when he removed to Missouri and engaged in farming in that state. In 1852 he crossed the plains to Oregon, and took the donation land claim which was his home at the time of his death. From 1859 to 1861 Mr. Claggett lived in Salem, but a year ago he insisted upon returning to the scenes of his more active life to spend the remainder of his days.

While residing in Kentucky, Mr. Claggett married Miss Mary Irvine, who died some 18 years ago. Thirteen children were born to them, of whom but one, W. D. Claggett, of Salem, is still living. The deceased leaves 22 grandchildren, among them John H. McNary, C. L. McNary, Miss Nina McNary, Mrs. H. T. Bruce and Mrs. W. T. Stoiz, of this city.

Mr. Claggett was well known to nearly all the old settlers in Western Oregon. He was recognized here as a man of great industry and of progressive ideas. While always taking an active interest in all public affairs, he was never a candidate for office. Until about six years ago he was a member of every Republican county convention held in this county, and was prominent in the councils of his party. His physical and mental activity continued until a few weeks ago, when a slight illness confined him to his room, finally resulting in his death. He left an estate valued at about $50,000.

The funeral will be conducted from the farm home at 2:30 P.M. tomorrow. Conveyances for all friends of the family will leave Rigdon's undertaking parlor at 1 P.M.

Mrs. Mary F. Miller, wife of E. C. Miller, prominent in labor circles in this city as an organizer, died this afternoon, aged 35 years. She was a native of Eastport, Me., and came to Salem two years ago from Boston.

Northwestern Postoffice Changes.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 1.—The postoffice at Susanville, Grant County, Or., has been moved a short distance eastward, without change of postmaster.

After October 6 a train service between Knab and Wilson, Wash., will be daily, except Sunday, an increase from three times a week.

The recent order of the Postoffice Department increasing steamboat service from Seattle, Wash., to Vancouver, B. C., to six times a week has been rescinded.

On October 31 the postoffice at York, Alaska, will be discontinued, mail thereafter going to Teller.

Genealogical Narrative

A History of the Claggett - Irvine Clans

by

Mrs. Edith Kerns Chambers

Limited Edition: Eugene, Oregon: 1940
The Woodford County Claggetts went to Missouri in two groups. Two brothers, Thomas and William, and one sister, Sarah, went directly into Missouri. Two brothers, Benjamin Mason and Charles, with the other sister Margaret, started from Todd County three years later in company with the Irvine family. Charles, now married to Mary Irvine, and Benjamin, after visiting Robert Irvine, went north to see their brothers and sister. They found the country settling up fast and that the slave question was disturbing. They decided to go to Clay County in the extreme west, where they had friends and relatives. Here Benjamin married Elizabeth Irvine, April 17, 1834.

Soon after they reached Clay County they heard of new lands to the north. They followed the trapper and hunter into Gentry County, where Mary Margaret, daughter of Charles and Mary Claggett, and the son of Benjamin and Elizabeth, had the distinction of being the first white children born in the county in the year of 1835.

From 1835 to the present year 1940 the narrative of the Claggett family is closely interwoven with that of the Irvines.
Reminiscences of Irvine Woodford Claggett

Missouri to Oregon

As told to Edith Kerns Chambers in 1927.

MY father, Benjamin Mason Claggett, enlisted twice for service in the Mexican War. He enlisted first on January 12, 1847, in Liberty, Missouri, as a private in Company H, Third Missouri Mounted Volunteers; and the second time at Athens (now Albany), county seat of Gentry County, September 22, 1847, under Captain Summers, Colonel Bonipham's regiment, commissary department. He was discharged at Fort Leavenworth.

On his return from first enlistment father sold his home in Gentry County and bought Mr. Plymate's improved farm in Harrison County. To this farm he added 80 acres bought with his soldier's rights. We were just nicely settled in this new home when we heard the folks in Gentry County were talking of going to Oregon. Father made a trip to his old home and after hearing of the wonders of that far off land returned and hastily sold our belongings and joined the rest of the family in the spring of 1852.

We stopped at Liberty, to visit an uncle, Samuel Hadley, who was a prominent man living in what seemed luxury to us. He was sheriff of his county. After this short visit we left for Saint Joseph to complete our equipment.

Our train was small. The unit was made up of the Irvine-Claggett-Berry families, all related. The most serious difficulty we encountered was crossing the Platte River. It was not only too expensive but caused delay to use the poor ferry. In fording the river we would often have to camp an extra night, for toward nightfall the river would rise and the quick-sand would make the crossing dangerous.

The Indians were friendly for the most part. Our troubles came as we neared the Blue Mountains. Frank Berry, standing guard one night, shot an Indian who was prowling around the camp. In retaliation the Indians drove off several of our horses and cattle.

Near the Snake River, five head were bought back at $5.00 a piece, after we had spent three days hunting for them. One time an old Indian made a dash at the children saying, "Charge George Washington".

We did not have much serious sickness. A young man, one of Uncle Robert's drivers, died soon after crossing the Platte river. Uncle Robert Irvine lost a child mid-way across the plains and his wife died after they left The Dalles.

Recollections of Elizabeth Claggett Kerns

Crossing the Plains in 1852

As Told to Edith Kerns Chambers in 1929.

WHEN the stories of the new west penetrated the little settlement in Gentry County, Missouri, Grandmother was as interested as her sons and daughters. We were living in our new home in Harrison County when we heard that the folks in Gentry County were planning to go to Oregon. We hastily disposed of our farm and surplus stock and joined them in March, 1852. Grandmother was still enthusiastic about making the trip with us.

On April first we started on that six months' journey. Robert Irvine, my uncle, served as captain of our train and was relieved by his brother Samuel and his brother-in-law, Charles Claggett. Robert Irvine and Charles Claggett had the best equipment. We had two yoke of oxen, and some loose cattle. I have often heard my mother say she walked two-thirds of the way to Oregon, often helping with the cattle. She carried through life a deep scar on her forehead from stampeding cattle.

We stopped near Liberty, Missouri, where we saw others making preparations for the westward journey. Our grandmother had a brother, Samuel Hadley, living in Clay County. He was a prominent man in his community and lived in luxury with many slaves. We enjoyed our stay there and considered it a “lark” to sleep in high poster beds.

The first exciting event of the trip was one of the crossings of the Platte River. After two or three trips were made across with trusty oxen we would have to find another crossing because of quicksand. Toward evening the river came up, and as we were the last ones to cross we nearly lost our goods. I shall never forget how my mother worked that evening drying our bedding and clothes. She seemed much distressed that the Bible was so soaked that the leaves were in danger of being lost.

Somewhere, perhaps half way across the plains, Uncle Charles Claggett’s team ran into ours and broke the rear wheels. We traveled a great distance in the two-wheeled cart constructed from our four-wheeled wagon. Our wagons carried, besides the children, our food, beds, clothing, and camp equipment. In our wagon the food boxes, covered with quilts, were used as seats. Two Dutch ovens swung under the wagon, and two split bottom chairs were fastened to the back.

In the beginning of our trip we could buy dried apples, salmon, and flour at the trading posts and from the Indians. The Indians would say “Swap salmon for powder”. As we neared the end of the journey we were two days without bread. My mother often told how she stayed away from us children so as not to hear us ask for bread.

Our train was small when we started out, but from time to time a wagon would join us. The wagons formed a circle at night and each family built its own fire and prepared its own food. Beds were made on the ground with the aid of ticks filled with feathers, but after the loss of the two wheels and one yoke of oxen it was necessary to discard feather beds; and when we lost our third ox, more articles were abandoned.

The only time there might have been serious trouble with the Indians occurred near the end of the journey. The train descended from the plateau into the valley of the Snake River. The wagons were taking their places in the circle and ours was the last to draw up. Father had gone to confer with the men as to who should stand guard. Mother was starting a fire when two Indian chiefs in all their paint came galloping up to our wagon. I was so fascinated with their colorful approach that they were at the end of the wagon before I realized my danger. With one loud whoop the rider nearest the wagon made a grab for me. I darted to the front only to find that the rider had whirled and was there to make his second attempt. Just at this time Father observed what was taking place and ran with his black-snake in his hand. I am sure that the Indian and I never forgot the sound of that whip as it struck the flank of the horse. Fortunately for us a long train appeared over the hill and the Indians did not dare to attack us. It was later estimated that several hundred Indians were on the war path. As it was, the two trains lost several head of cattle and horses that night.

At The Dalles came the first break in our train. The men who were not needed to take the stock and wagons overland remained at the post a few days. They constructed rafts and floated down the Columbia to the Cascade Falls. Here were stationed men who were hired to take them around the Falls. They took passage on a large scow. After four days of travel they were joined by the rest of the train at the mouth of the Sandy.

It was a sad parting at The Dalles. Father and Mother were compelled to remain for sometime at the post to earn enough money to go on. I shall never forget the tears shed by my mother as she said goodbye to her mother. This was the last time we ever saw Grandmother Hadley. Margaret Hadley Irvine died the night the family arrived at their destination, Salem, Oregon. At last, after that long journey of six months, she rested in the Mission Cemetery, the first one buried there.
Charles Claggett

CHARLES CLAGGETT, youngest son of Thomas and Mary Mason Claggett, was born October 15, 1813, in Woodford County, Kentucky. When a young man he visited his sister Margaret and her husband, John D. Claggett in Todd County, Kentucky. John D. and Margaret in 1828 had purchased the Irvine plantation from Jess Irvine and it was easy for Charles to become acquainted with their elder daughter, Mary South Irvine. Elizabeth, Mary’s sister, told how this dashing young man persisted in his attention to her sister. When Mary would see him coming on his jet black horse, she would bribe Elizabeth to tell him that she was not at home. Persistence finally won and they were married in the Irvine brick house in Elkton, Kentucky.

Charles and Polly accompanied the Irvine family to Missouri and settled in Gentry County. Charles was a successful farmer and was well equipped to make the trip to Oregon in 1852. In Oregon, Charles bought land five miles north of Salem. He imported the first goats brought to Marion County, Oregon. It is told of him that he loved to sit on a log and let the goats climb all around him, feeding them sugar and bits of turnip. In the next decade Charles and Polly added many tracts of land to their home-place. Charles always gave credit to his wife for their success. He often said she handled their farm produce so successfully that all current expenses were met by returns from cows, geese and chickens. As his daughters married he gave to each a tract of land, and before long they were his neighbors, the McNarys, the Pughs, the Savages and his son, William Claggett.

Satisfied, now that their children were established, Charles and Polly bought a cozy home on Commercial street in Salem. Here they lived with two grandchildren, Ellen and Annie, until Polly died in 1889. As long as Charles lived in town he took great pleasure in hitching up old Brownie to his buggy and spending the day on the farm. In the evening he would chat and play croquet with his neighbors. He had many friends in town and in the country. He was always generous, dividing his fruit and vegetables with his friends.

The last few years were spent on the farm with his granddaughter, Ellen, and her husband, Frank Welch. He was active and in good health up to his death in 1902. He lies beside his wife, Mary, in the Claggett Cemetery on the home-place.

—Mrs. Bess Bruce, Portland, Oregon.
"Charles Claggett, a worthy pioneer of Oregon, is a native of Woodford county, Kentucky, born October 13, 1818, a son of Thomas Claggett, who was also a native of the Blue Grass State, and lived and died there; the paternal grandfather was a Virginian and an early settler of Kentucky. Thomas Claggett married Miss Mary Mason, a native of Virginia, and to them were born seven children, only two of whom survive, William and Charles. The latter is the subject of this biographical notice. He passed an uneventful youth on his father's farm, and attended the common schools. When he came of age, in 1834, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Irving, of Kentucky, and they then removed to Missouri, where they resided twelve years. In 1852 they crossed the plains with ox teams, being seven months en route, and arrived at Salem, October 18, 1852. They went into the country, and Mr. Claggett took a Government ranch of 200 acres; he built a house, improved the land, and as he prospered from year to year he made additional purchases of land, as his neighbors were willing to sell, until he now has 600 acres; this land is under excellent cultivation, and is well improved with good, substantial farm buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Claggett are the parents of ten children, only two of whom are living: W. D., a son; and Sally A., the widow of Mr. Pugh. They have reared two granddaughters, whose mother died during their infancy; one married and the other is keeping house for her grandfather; the death of the grandmother occurred August 13, 1889; she was a true and faithful wife, and for fifty-five years bore her share of the burdens of life, and lightened those of others.

Mr. Claggett divided his farm among his children, retained 220 acres, and in 1880 he retired from active pursuits. He bought a pleasant residence in Salem, where he is surrounded with all the comforts of life, and is held in the highest respect by all who know him. He has led a life of industry, has attended strictly to his own affairs, and has met with the prosperity which such conduct of life deserves, he has always been straightforward in all his business dealings, and has the utmost confidence of his fellow men.

Previous to the late civil war he adhered to the principles of the Democratic party, but since that time he has cast his vote with the Republicans."

COSPER CLAGGETT.—In this city, May 27, 1891, Mr. Charles C. Cosper and Miss Anna M. Claggett.

The above event took place at the residence of Mr. Charles Claggett, the bride's grandfather, at 8 o'clock last evening. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. F. H. Gwynne, of the Presbyterian church, in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends of the happy young couple.

The parlors were beautifully decorated with the choicest roses, while the bride wore a white muslin veiling dress, which set off to perfection her natural charms. The smiling faces of the assembled friends, with the young couple standing there taking upon themselves the solemn vows made a very pretty and impressive scene. Miss Claggett is well known and universally esteemed in Salem. Mr. Cosper is one of our business young men who has won the respect of all. He is with the firm of Fisburn & Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Cosper were the recipients of numerous presents. After the ceremony all repaired to the residence of Mrs. A. B. Cosper, where a wedding supper had been prepared. The Mandolin club of which Mr. Cosper is a member, had planned a pleasant surprise by going to the house and rendering a few of their choice selections.

They will reside at the newly erected residence of Mr. Cosper on Marion street, which will be completed in a few weeks. The Journal joins with their numerous friends in congratulations.

OBITUARY.

Charles William Claggett, who died at the Salem hospital yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, was born on the Claggett homestead about five miles north of Salem, March 28, 1874, and was the oldest son of the late W. D. Claggett. Mr. Claggett was married March 26, 1903, to Della Goodrich, daughter of William Goodrich, of this city. Mr. Claggett is survived by his widow, a daughter, Reta Eliza, 9 years old, a son, Chas. William, Jr., 3 years old, and a son, Lloyd Alvin, 16 months, besides four brothers and five sisters.

While engaged assisting in baling hops on the 15th inst. on the McNary and Stith farm, Mr. Claggett met with an accident resulting in injuries causing his death yesterday morning. He was driving the horse used to supply the power, through a strip, for compressing the hops in the bale when the sweep or lever to which it was hitched gave way, flew back and struck him, shattering one of his legs below the knee and otherwise injuring him. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the hospital, where he passed away without regaining consciousness. Charley, as he was familiarly known, was widely known and most highly esteemed as a citizen, friend and neighbor. He was a member of the Modern Brotherhood of America and Modern Woodmen. Funeral services will be held at the residence of William Goodrich, 482 South High street, Tuesday next at 10 a.m. and interment in the Claggett cemetery five miles north of Salem.

1911: Marion County Death Certificate #3851 William D. Claggett, white, male, age 71yrs, widower, bur 21 Dec 1911 Claggett Cem

"WILLIAM D. CLAGGETT, whose fifty-one years of residence in Oregon covers almost the entire period of development and improvements here, was for many years extensively engaged in farming and stock-raising and still supervises his interests in those directions from his home in Salem, where he has resided since 1880.

A native of Missouri, William D. Claggett was born near Albany, Gentry county, November 28, 1840, a son of Charles Claggett, who was born in Woodford county, Ky., October 13, 1813. The latter’s father died in Kentucky when Charles Claggett was an infant. Charles Claggett was reared in that state, and after attaining his majority began farming on his own account in Gentry county. In 1852 he left the Mississippi valley for the coast, making the long and tedious journey across the sands and through the mountain passes until he reached Marion county. He settled four miles north of Salem, where he secured about three hundred and twenty acres of land covered with a heavy growth of timber. He at once began to improve the property, and in those early days he burned charcoal. His pits were long enough to take in logs of seventy-five feet, and would contain two thousand bushels of charcoal. Each pit would be left to burn for three months, before the product was considered ready for the market. In this Mr. Claggett was quite successful, although the early years of residence here were a period of hardship to the family. The father had but a single dollar at the time of his arrival, and the first home of the family was a log cabin, 16x16 feet, and without a floor of any kind, or a stove or a fireplace. Through many years, however, Charles Claggett successfully engaged in the raising of stock and grain, and added to his original purchase the adjoining farm. His death occurred October 7, 1902, and thus passed away one of the honored pioneer settlers. He had a brother, Mason Claggett, who was a soldier in the Mexican war.

The mother of William D., Mrs. Mary (Irvine) Claggett, was a native of Kentucky and a daughter of Jesse Irvine, who removed to Missouri, where he engaged in farming until his death in 1842. Mrs. Claggett passed away in Salem in 1891. In the family were ten children, of whom only four reached adult age: Mrs. Margaret McNary, who died near Salem; Mrs. Sallie A. Pugh, who also died near Salem; William D., and Mrs. Martha Savage, who was accidentally killed in Marion county.

When but eleven years of age William D. Claggett came with his parents to Oregon. They left their Missouri home on the 1st of April, with two wagons drawn by oxen, and some loose cattle. The boy William drove an ox-team of four yoke, and in the lead had a pair of three-year-old oxen which he had broken from calves, and had made so tractable that he could stand on the wagon tongue and guide them simply by speaking to them. The party crossed the Platte river where it was three miles wide. Mr. Claggett had his three-year-olds in the lead of seven yoke of cattle, and had they stopped swimming the wagons would have sunk. This yoke of oxen crossed the Platte seven times in one day, leading the other big teams. At length they reached the old Oregon trail and proceeded slowly until they arrived at Fort Hall, when they quickened their pace and passed every team which they overtook upon the road. On July 4 they reached the North pass and came on toward Oregon, arriving at The Dalles, September 13, and proceeding down the Columbia on a flatboat, while the cattle were brought by the trail.

Mr. Claggett arrived at Salem October 13, 1852, and proceeded to make himself useful on the home farm. In the winter months, when his services were not needed at home, he attended the district schools, and between the years 1852 and 1862 he was a student in the Willamette University. For some time he continued with his father, assisting in the operation of the home farm. Soon after reaching maturity he bought one hundred acres, to which he added another hundred, then three hundred and forty and subsequently other tracts, until he now owns over nine hundred acres in Marion county. His farm is devoted principally to the production of grain and the raising of stock. He has made a specialty of fine Angora goats and now has a large and valuable herd. He is one of the pioneers in this industry in Oregon, and has the largest herd, and has taken many prizes with his goats at the state fairs. He has also owned many fine horses, including registered Clydesdales and some fine trotting stock, on which he has also won first premiums, and has raised fine sheep. Mr. Claggett has always been a lover of high grade stock and has ever kept on hand animals of superior excellence. One of his horses, Homdell, has a race record of 2:18, and has a halfmile time record of 1:08.

Mr. Claggett married Miss Ella Hennis, who was born in Iowa and died in Marion county, Ore., leaving two children: Mrs. Annie Cosper, of Salem: and Mrs. Ellen Welch, who is living on the old homestead. For his second wife Mr. Clageett chose Miss Eliza Parrish, who was born in Iowa and died in Oregon. There were eight children of that union: Amelia, of New York; Charles W. of Salem; Archie, who is on one of the father's farms: Thomas of Washington; Clyde, who is also on one of his father's farm; Benjamin, Margaret and Harriet at home. Mr. Claggett's third marriage was to Miss Lizzie Jacobs, who was born in Marion county, her father having been one of the first settlers of that state, arriving here in the earliest pioneer days.

Since 1880 Mr. Claggett has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has held office in the lodge and encampment. In politics he is an active Republican, As the years have passed, through the careful conduct of his business interests, through judicious investment and unflagging industry, he has prospered, and is today one of the substantial citizens of Salem, having extensive and valuable property holdings in Marion county. Soon after his arrival in the county he was ill for a short time with mountain fever, but has since enjoyed remarkable health, for the past fifty years never missing a meal a single day. He is familiar with pioneer history, and has witnessed the development of the county, as early conditions have been replaced by those of an advanced civilization, making Oregon one of the most promising commonwealths in this great country." [Portrait and Biographical Record of the Willamette Valley p. 893]
"William D. Claggett, a prosperous agriculturist of Marion county, has been a resident of the State since 1852. He was born in Missouri, November 28, 1840, and at the age of twelve years crossed the plains to Oregon with his father, Charles Claggett, whose history will be found on another page of this volume. William D. was sent to the public school, and later finished his education at the Willamette University under Prof. Hoyt, who was the president of the institution at that time. He left college in 1862, and engaged in farming on leased land. After two years, however, he purchased 100 acres of choice land, on which he built a home; later he added another 100 acres, and devoted himself industriously to its cultivation, meeting with gratifying results. In 1880 he bought 500 acres adjoining his ranch, and continued the management of the same until 1880, since which time he has leased the whole. He now occupies a pleasant home which he bought in Salem.

Mr. Claggett was united in marriage in 1865 to Miss Ellen Hennis, a native of Iowa, and a daughter of Thomas Hennis, who came to Oregon in 1852. Two children were born of this union: Annie, wife of Charles Casper, and Eva E., who resides in Salem with her grandfather Claggett. Mrs. Claggett died in 1870. Two years later Mr. Claggett was married a second time, being united to Miss Eliza E. Parrish, a daughter of George W. Parrish, of Clackamas county, Oregon. They had born to them eight children: George died at the age of six years from injuries received from one of the horses in the barn; Amelia is the wife of Charles Cook, who is in the postal telegraph service in Portland; Charles W. is farming on the old homestead; Archie, Thomas, Mary M., Dockie C. and Hennie I., are at home.

Politically, Mr. Claggett adheres to the principles of the Republican party. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and takes an active interest in the fraternity. He has led a life of industry and devotion to one purpose, and his efforts have been rewarded with success. He has never gambled and has been strictly temperate in all his habits, thereby winning the deepest respect and entire confidence of the community." [An Illustrated History of Oregon by Rev H.K. Hines p. 265-6]
William D. Claggett

WILLIAM D. CLAGGETT, son of Charles Claggett, was eleven years of age when he came to Oregon with his parents. They left Gentry County, April 1, with two wagons drawn by oxen, and loose cattle. William drove an ox-team of four yoke, and in the lead had a pair of three-year-old oxen which he had broken and made so tractable that he could stand on the wagon tongue and guide them simply by speaking to them. When they crossed the Platte River, where it was three miles wide, his three-year-olds were swimming in the lead. This yoke of oxen crossed the river seven times in one day, leading other large teams.

From the Platte River to Fort Hall the wagon train moved slowly. From Fort Hall they passed many other trains and reached the North Pass by July fourth. It took them two slow and difficult months to reach The Dalles. On September 13, at the Cascades, they secured a flat boat and came down the Columbia. At the mouth of the Sandy River, they found their wagons and cattle which had been driven along wandering Indian trails.

The Claggetts arrived in Salem October 13, 1852, and after finding a temporary home, began to look for land. Charles Claggett was fortunate in finding a tract five miles north of Salem which he purchased for a reasonable price.

William attended the district schools and Willamette University until 1862. In his spare time he worked on his father's farm and began to invest his savings in farm land. His first purchase was 100 acres; soon 100 more acres were added; then later 340 acres, until at his death he had almost 1000 acres in Marion County. He, like his father, specialized in fine Angora goats. He had registered Clydesdales and some fine trotting stock. On this high grade stock he won many premiums at county and state fairs.
CLAGGETT SUED FOR DIVORCE AND PARTITION OF PROPERTY

W. D. Claggett’s recent series of legal embroilments came to a climax this morning when his third wife, who was formerly Mrs. Elizabeth McFarland of Turner, filed a suit for divorce in the circuit court Thursday.

The complaint alleges that Claggett entered upon the present matrimonial venture at Turner on September 23, 1882, and that since that time he has treated his wife in a manner justifying divorce. Mrs. Claggett claims that her husband is of a sulky and morose disposition and he is pusillanimous to such an extent that he has refused to provide decent clothing for his wife and family and that he has offered Mrs. Claggett refuse meat for her food.

Moreover, the complaint alleges, Claggett has used bigamous language to his wife whenever she has mentioned to him the present state of affairs. According to Mrs. Claggett, her husband not only refuses to buy food and clothing for his family, but he will not even buy himself respectable clothing. One time, the complaint states, when Bill was in sore need of a new shirt, Mrs. Claggett bought one and presented it to him. Whereupon Claggett went into a fit of rage, telling his wife that it was none of her damned business whether he wore a shirt or not, and calling her name too vile to be set down in print.

For three weeks, the complaint states Mrs. Claggett has been on the verge of starvation. This, she says, the defendant knew, and although he was possessed of ample property, he refused to provide for the plaintiff the common necessities of life. And all this time, the paper further states, Bill was boarding around at the various restaurants in the city and at the houses of his relatives. He also took his two daughters to the restaurants that they might obtain a square meal while his wife remained at home starving.

But, according to the complaint, Bill was not satisfied that his wife should remain at home starving. He wanted her to vacate the place absolutely. To this end he removed all the furniture to one of his farms. He even took with him the kitchen range. This action was the more lamentable when the plaintiff reminded us that she bought the furniture with her own money.

Through the pages of fine print on the bad side of Bill’s character is set forth in detail. Then follow five pages and a half telling how rich Claggett is, about a dozen different farms or other pieces of property being designated, and the document concludes with the prayer that when the marriage bonds be dissolved, one third of these lands shall go to the plaintiff.

Carseen and Brown are the attorneys for the plaintiff.
WIFE PROMISED DIVORCE

Mrs. Claggett to Secure Decree, but
No Money for Children.

SALEM, Or., Dec. 17.—(Special)—
At the conclusion of the trial of the famous Claggett divorce case this evening, Judge William Galloway announced that he will grant a divorce in favor of plaintiff, Mrs. Elizabeth McFarland-Claggett, who charged her husband, W. D. Claggett, with cruel and inhuman treatment. The Judge suggested that the parties get together and agree upon their property interests, but if they cannot agree, he will make such a decree as will provide for Mrs. Claggett during the rest of her life without permitting her children to reap the benefit of the decree.

Claggett is a well-known pioneer farmer. He was a widower when he married Mrs. McFarland in 1905, three years after she had secured a divorce from her husband. Trouble began when her grown children became frequent visitors at the Claggett home and after much quarreling the wife brought suit for divorce, alleging that Claggett was too penniless to provide her children with sufficient food. In answer Claggett charged extravagance on the part of his wife and her children.

Mrs. Claggett alleged that her husband was worth $50,000 and he admitted it, but in his oral decision this evening Judge Galloway expressed the opinion that he is worth $100,000. He also said that his own experience in maintaining a family of three convinces him that in maintaining a family of six on $850 a year, Mr. Claggett did not properly provide for his family.

The details of the decree of the divorce will not be announced until next month.
WILLIAM CLAGGETT
ATTACKED BY PNEUMONIA

About 8 o'clock yesterday morning, William Claggett, one of Salem's oldest pioneers, was suddenly seized with a severe attack of pneumonia, while at his home on North Commercial street. Dr. Byrd was immediately called and relatives of the elderly man were informed of his serious condition. Mrs. Frank Welch, daughter of the pioneer was with her father all of last night and the services of a trained nurse have also been resorted to. Dr. Byrd stated that the age of the patient, 76 years, was a serious matter to consider in a case of pneumonia, but everything possible is being done and it is thought that the patient has an even chance for recovery.

Mr. Claggett is a well known resident of this city and has considerable property interests here. He also owns a beautiful farm out near Chemawa. His many friends and the Journal hope that he will soon be convalescent.
